

GLASGOW DAILYTIMES.COM

Let them eat steak!

By BRAD DICKERSON

Glasgow Daily Times

Wed, May 07 2008

The sun appeared from behind the clouds and the smell of grilling ribeye steaks permeated the air at Saturday's second annual Barren County Cattlemen's Festival.

"It always shines good right here on the square," said Judge-Executive Davie Greer in her opening remarks.

She was one of several local dignitaries present for the event, which was put on by the local cattlemen's chapter. It is the largest in the state with over 660 members.

Other dignitaries included Glasgow Mayor Darrell Pickett, magistrates with the Barren County Fiscal Court, members of the Glasgow City Council and Roger Thomas, executive director of the Governor's Office of Agriculture Policy.

"We look forward to visiting with you throughout the day," Thomas told the crowd, which was more than 100 strong.

Attendees got to see a number of antique tractor displays and enjoy ribeye steak or brisket sandwiches.

For the young and the young at heart, clowns were on the move around the square providing entertainment. Local eateries also took part in a ribeye cookoff.

Inflatables and an opportunity to guess the weight of a bull were a few of the other activities available.

"There's a little something here for everyone," Greer said.

Copyright © 1999-2008 cnhi, inc.

Photos

These gentlemen were not "clowning around" when it came to their enjoyment of some of the ribeye steak samples available at Saturday's second annual Barren County Cattlemen's Festival on Glasgow's Public Square. Glasgow Daily Times